

iPad Accessories from Satechi and ESR

January 2026

John Connor

On Good Friday I stood in line at the West County Apple Store and traded in my iPad Mini 6 for an 11 inch M3 iPad Air. That meant I'd need some iPad accessories.

I had been reading about various iPad stands / cases, including the high quality but expensive Magic Keyboard from Apple, and also about various hubs to attach to an iPad to power it, provide access to additional ports, and to connect to an external monitor. I decided to go with two products that would provide these features.

My first item is the Aluminum stand and hub for iPad Pro from Satechi.
(Note: I'm using it on the 11 iPad Air just fine).

Transform your iPad with the ultimate case that lets you unlock the full potential of your tablet for work and play

Devices: iPad Air 11 2025

The biggest advantage of this product, as I see it, is its ability to display an iPad in both landscape and portrait positions. The image below shows this particularly well. The product comprises a case and a separate iPad enclosure that keeps the iPad's sides protected when you remove it from the case.
